Your mind is precious! It is sacred. Therefore, the education of one's mind is also sacred. Indeed, education is a religious responsibility. Of course, our opportunities and abilities will vary a great deal.

But, in the pursuit of one's education, individual desire is more important than is the institution you choose; personal drive is more significant that is the faculty.

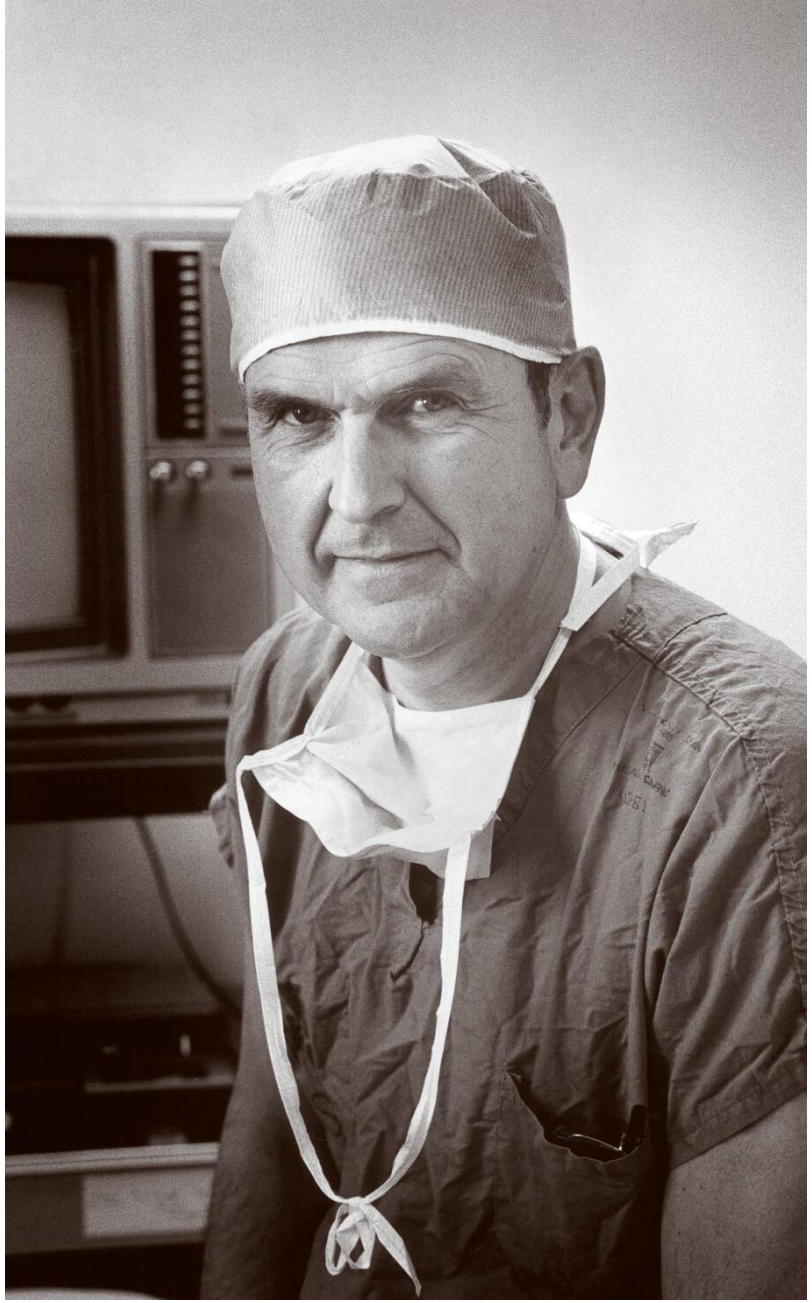

Russell M. Nelson

BYU-Idaho Devotional January 2010

Personal Commitment

Many years ago, as an untrained teenager, I secured temporary employment at Christmas time. The work was dull, repetitive, and monotonous. Each hour of the day passed slowly.

I resolved then and there that I would obtain an education that would qualify me for more meaningful work in my life. I determined that I would become a doctor of medicine.

Resolve to Get an Education

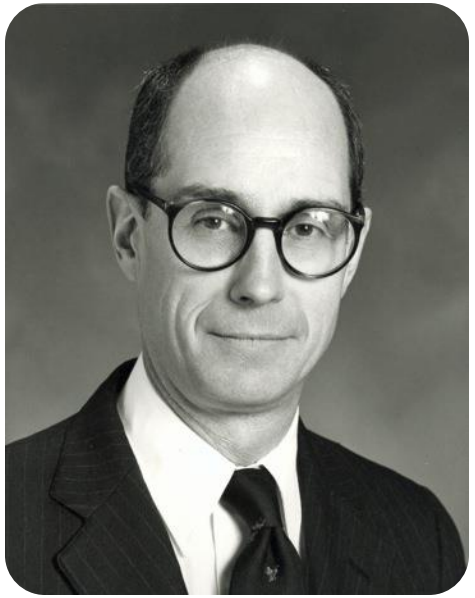

"We should get all the education and training we possibly can so that we can be prepared. Prepared to serve in the world and the Church. Prepared to be wise counselors and companions to our spouses. Prepared to be effective teachers to our children and those young people over whom we have influence. The more we learn, the greater influence we can assert for good.

(Camille N. Johnson, "Seek Learning by Study and by Faith" [BYU–Pathway Worldwide devotional, Oct. 19, 2021], byupathway.org)

Laying the Foundation

"We must also find ways for this college to serve young people whose needs are shaped by a great variety of cultures and situations, and who may not be able to come to this campus…. We will find direct ways to move the blessings of education … from this campus out into the lives of men and women everywhere."

President Henry B. Eyring, Inaugural Response, December 1971.

Laying the Foundation

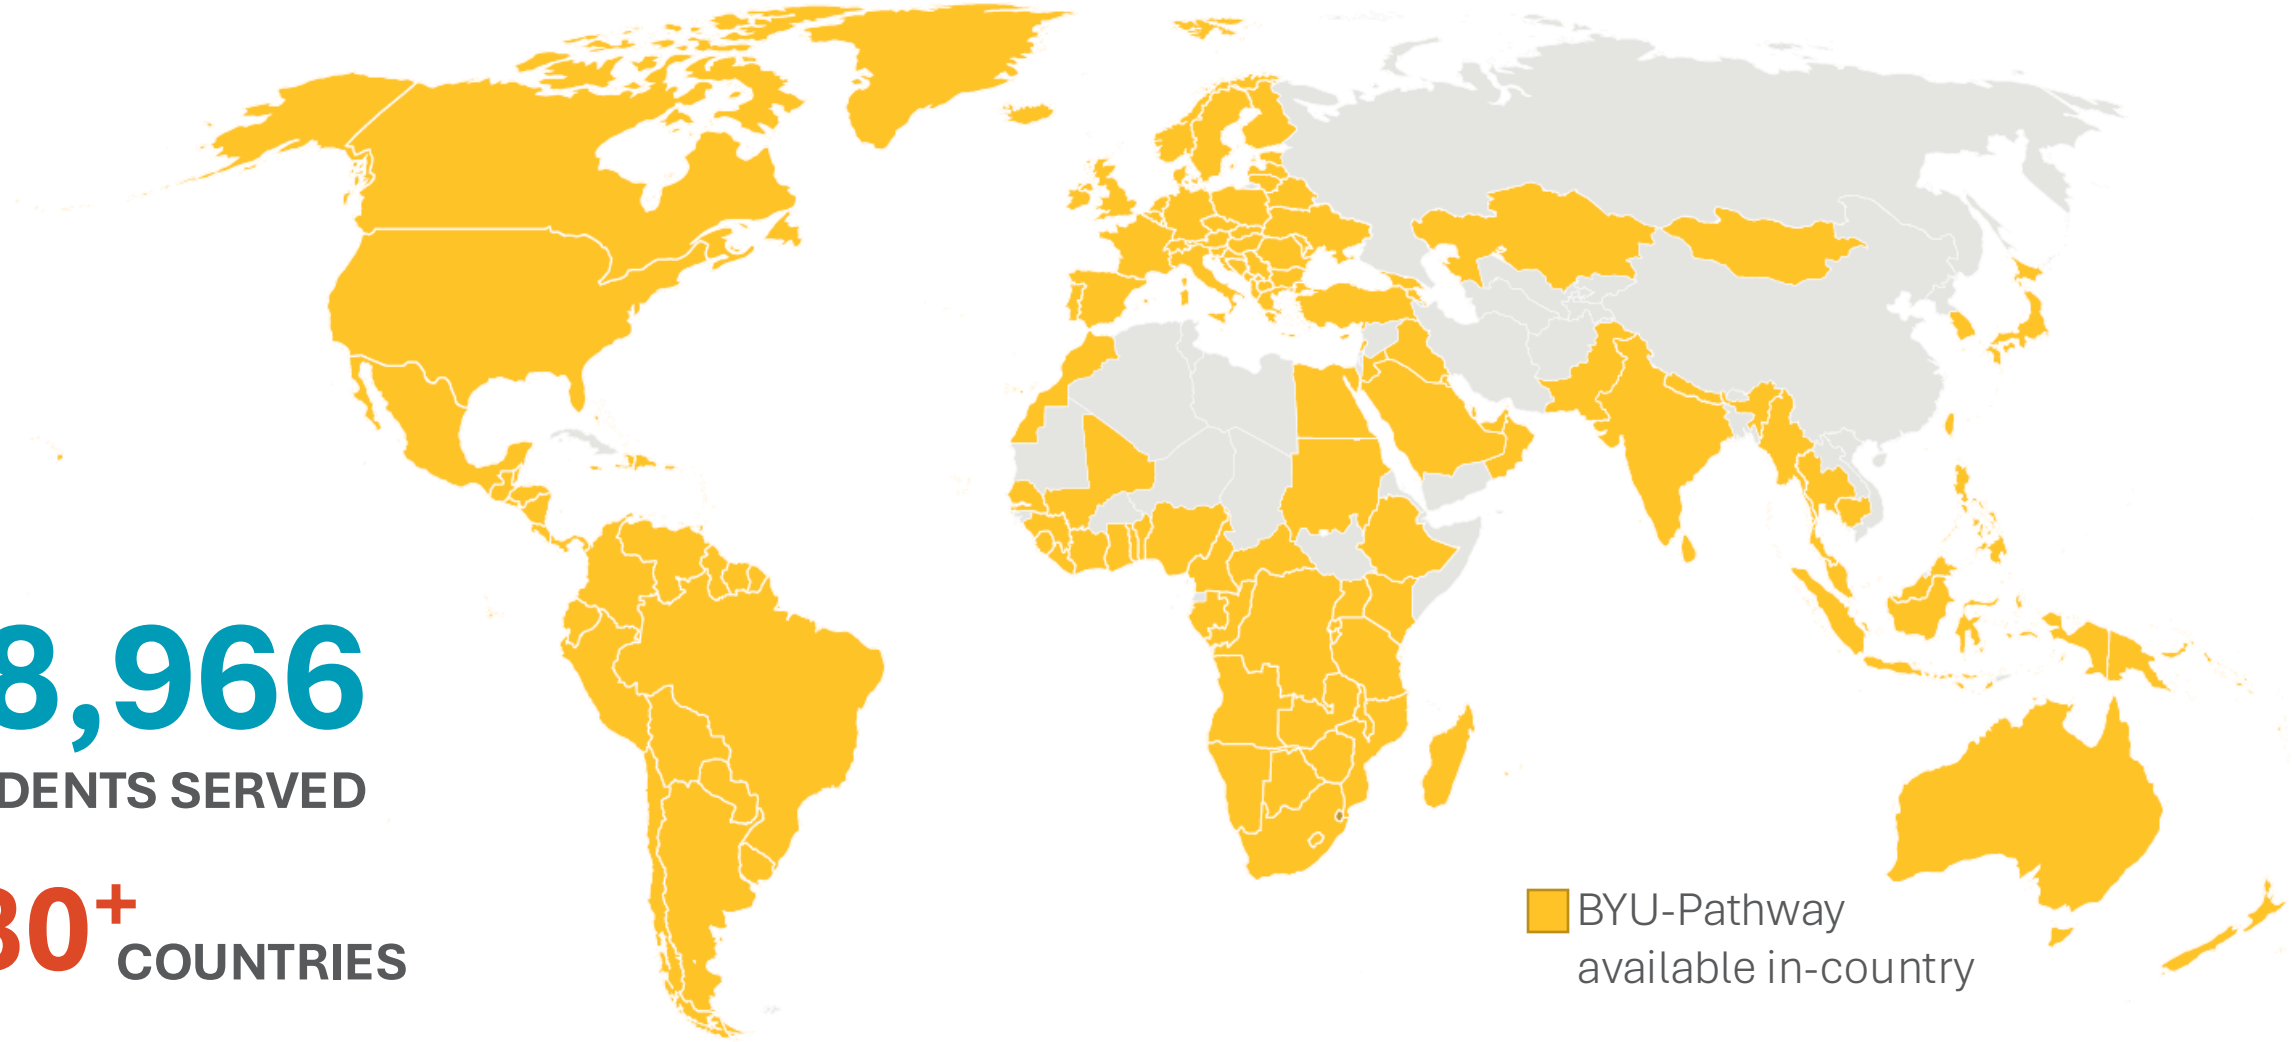

"It will be necessary for us ... to serve ever better the thousands of students we have on campus while simultaneously reaching out to bless the lives of tens of thousands of young Latter-day Saints throughout the world.... We must learn how to assist and bless institute students and other LDS youth in Rhode Island and Rome while effectively serving our students on campus in Rexburg."

President David A. Bednar, Inaugural Response, February 1998.

"I was made president of BYU, and I had the opportunity to answer my mail every week; half of which consisted of people writing to say, Well, when do we get a BYU of the East? When do we get a BYU of the South? Or how about BYU-California? Or BYU-Europe? And on and on and on.

Well clearly there was an appetite, there was a hunger, for Latter-day Saint education, but it was also evident that it wasn't going to be very evenly distributed."

Involving the Lord in Learning

When I was 19, I dropped out of college, fully intending to go back after a short break. But life happened, and somehow sixteen years passed without me ever returning.

When I finally decided to try BYU-Pathway, what surprised me most was how deeply the program integrates the Lord into every part of education: into our careers, our goals, and even our everyday choices. I had never really experienced learning this way before.

Suddenly every lesson connected back to the scriptures. Every assignment invited me to think spiritually. And every week I felt myself drawn closer to Heavenly Father in a way that reached far beyond Sunday worship. I started turning to Him not just during trials or gratitude, but in the small, daily decisions that actually shape who I'm becoming.
